

No Free Google Apps for Small Businesses

Written by Marco Attard
12 December 2012

Google starts charging small businesses (as in with 10 employees or less) using Google Apps--even if companies already making free use of the cloud applications can continue doing so.

Originally Google offered a free version of Google apps together with the "premium" subscription-based Google Apps for Business. Now it only offers the premium version.

The subscription ($50 annually per user) includes phone support, 25GB of data storage and a 99.99% uptime guarantee.

Individuals, schools and universities can still use Google Apps for free.

Google Apps are just one of a number of cloud productivity suites available on the market. Similar offerings come from the likes of Microsoft, Intuit and Sage.

Go Changes to Google Apps for Businesses