

Dell Wants More EMEA Staff

Written by Marco Attard
20 August 2015

Dell announces its largest EMEA hiring initiative since going private back in 2013-- one looking to hire 450 team members expanding Dell counsel and sales coverage, customer support and access to Dell products.

The hiring drive is part of an effort to expand the global Dell sales force by over 1000 in 2015. The company adds the most recent fiscal year records "solid" 4% revenue growth, with increases from each business unit and global region.

"We have a tremendous amount of opportunities for new hires to apply and cultivate their talents at Dell," sthe company says. "We have the most robust and technically advanced product line in our history, as well as an increased wealth of employee benefits such as flexible working and employee resource groups. We need people who understand our goals and what our customers need as we continue to evolve as a private company."

Interested individuals can check the careers section on the Dell website in the link below.

Go Dell Careers