

Pivotal Names New CEO

Written by Marco Attard
21 August 2015

Pivotal announces a change in leadership-- executive VP of products and R&D Rob Mee replaces Paul Martiz, who retains a seat in Pivotal leadership as executive chairman.

Mee is the founder of Pivotal Labs, the agile programming specialist EMC acquired back in 2012. Pivotal Labs became the foundation of Pivotal once the company was spun off from EMC and VMware in 2013.

"Rob Mee has been credited for shaping the software development cultures of some of Silicon Valley's most influential and valuable companies. He's an exceptional leader and technologist, passionate about our mission, committed to our principles and values, and knows how to build a successful business," Maritz says. "As executive chairman, I look forward to remaining actively engaged with Pivotal, its partners and its customers, and supporting Rob in his new role as CEO."

The leadership change comes as the Pivotal cloud platform, Cloud Foundry, reaches the milestone of $100 million in annual bookings, a doubling in size from 2014.

"Entire industries, from automotive to financial services to retail, are being disrupted," Mee says. "Pivotal brings a transformative approach to software development to help companies thrive in a disruptive world."

Pivotal Names New CEO

Written by Marco Attard
21 August 2015

Go Pivotal Announces Changes in Executive Leadership and Record Results