

Google Chromebox: Now for Meetings

Written by Bob Snyder
20 February 2014

Google VP of Product Management Caesar Sengupta announces $999 Chromebox bundle for meetings, a bundle designed to outfit meeting rooms with a cost-effective, easy-to-use meeting solution powered by the Google Cloud.

ASUS, HP and Dell will supposedly offer this new Google enterprise solution under their own brands. This game-changer comes with:

- A Google Chromebox, with wired and wifi connectivity
- A USB HD web cam
- A USB microphone/speakerphone
- A custom Bluetooth/RF remote control with a d-pad and full Qwerty keyboard on the rear.

Plans call for the kit bundle to sell in US at $999 – including a 1-year device management subscription to “Chrome for meetings” priced at $250. The device ties directly back to your Google Apps domain, providing management and linking to a room calendar in your organization (you must be a Google Apps customer to achieve this functionality).

Google Chromebox: Now for Meetings

Written by Bob Snyder
20 February 2014

SDWear/SA Tessler Reviews the Chromebox for Meetings